

What is MOCA?

The Muresk Old Collegians' Association was established in 1930 as an 'alumni' of the Muresk Agricultural College, which later became the Muresk Institute of Agriculture, and is now known as the Muresk Institute.

MOCA's aim has always been to promote the development of agriculture in Australia by the interchange of ideas between the members of the Association, the agribusiness sector, the Muresk student body and the broader community.

MOCA, a not-for-profit organisation managed by volunteers, provides a forum for past and present Muresk students, graduates, staff and friends to keep in touch through reunions, seminars, lectures and events.

The MOCA of today promotes the value and opportunities of careers available globally within the sphere of agribusiness and food. Over the decades MOCA has provided awards and support to students studying agriculture and its supporting industries, and continues to do so.

Muresk, in its many educational forms, celebrated the 90th Anniversary of its establishment on Sunday 30th October 2016. This was a milestone MOCA was keen to promote and see celebrated by those who have formed part of the wonderful 90 year history of Muresk. This includes the people and companies that have supported the achievements of Muresk's students, graduates and staff across the decades, along with those who will be charged with leading small and large agribusinesses at all points in the food, fibre and forestry supply chains, well into the future.
